

British Art Studies

November 2021

Redefining the British Decorative Arts

Edited by Iris Moon

British Art Studies

Issue 21, published 30 November 2021

Redefining the British Decorative Arts

Edited by Iris Moon

Cover image: Michelle Erickson, Shell Dish and Helios Dish, 2021, 3D scanned printed, molded and slipcast porcelain with lifecast lobster and antler and ceramic transfer prints, width: 8 in. 3D scanning and printing done in collaboration with Dr Bernard Means at the Virtual Curation Lab, Virginia Commonwealth University. Collection of the artist.. Digital image courtesy of the artist / Photograph by Robert Hunter (all rights reserved).

PDF generated on 15 February 2024

Note: British Art Studies is a digital publication and intended to be experienced online and referenced digitally. PDFs are provided for ease of reading offline. Please do not reference the PDF in academic citations: we recommend the use of DOIs (digital object identifiers) provided within the online article. These unique alphanumeric strings identify content and provide a persistent link to a location on the internet. A DOI is guaranteed never to change, so you can use it to link permanently to electronic documents with confidence.

Published by:

Paul Mellon Centre
16 Bedford Square
London, WC1B 3JA
<https://www.paul-mellon-centre.ac.uk>

In partnership with:

Yale Center for British Art
1080 Chapel Street
New Haven, Connecticut
<https://britishart.yale.edu>

ISSN: 2058-5462

DOI: 10.17658/issn.2058-5462

URL: <https://www.britishartstudies.ac.uk>

Editorial team: <https://www.britishartstudies.ac.uk/about/editorial-team>

Advisory board: <https://www.britishartstudies.ac.uk/about/advisory-board>

Produced in the United Kingdom.

A joint publication by

PAUL MELLON
CENTRE

YALE CENTER FOR BRITISH ART

Contents

Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage, Glenn Adamson

Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage

Glenn Adamson

Authors

Curator, Writer, and Historian

Cite as

Glenn Adamson, "Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage", British Art Studies, Issue 21, <https://dx.doi.org/10.17658/issn.2058-5462/issue-21/gadamson>

Introduction by

Iris Moon, Assistant Curator, European Sculpture and Decorative Arts, The Metropolitan Museum of Art

Introduction

How can the past be reshaped in the hands of contemporary artists? This feature highlights and archives the work of participants in the exhibition, Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage, presenting an introduction to the exhibition written by its guest curator Glenn Adamson, and the recordings of two virtual events (the second forthcoming in spring 2022) in which the artists reflect on their contributions.<sup>1</sup> The crossing of the Mayflower in 1620 has been enshrined as a founding myth of American history, one that is eloquently questioned through the revival of seventeenth-century British and Indigenous artisanal practices by a range of contemporary artists. Weaving, firing, and carving are used to reshape the triumphalist language that has typically been used to talk about this historical moment of encounter. In other ways, the artistic techniques shown here raise questions about the tensions between craft and the decorative arts. As the transatlantic context explored in Another Crossing makes clear, the British decorative arts were shaped in untold ways by Indigenous practices and a history of colonization and appropriation, but also by the possibilities of bartering, exchange, and mutuality.

Figure 1.

Installation view showing works by Allison Smith, Katie Schwab, and Jonathan James-Perry (Aquinnah Wampanoag), Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage, Fuller Craft Museum, 2 May-20 September 2020. Digital image courtesy of the artists and Fuller Craft Museum.

Figure 2.

Installation view showing works by Michelle Erickson, Katie Schwab, Annette Bellamy, and Jasleen Kaur, Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage, Fuller Craft Museum, 2 May-20 September 2020. Digital image courtesy of the artists and Fuller Craft Museum.

Figure 3.

Annette Bellamy, Lena Amason-Berns, Sonya Kelliher-Combs, Tommy Joseph, Da-Ka-Xeen Mehner, Rebecca Lyon, and Heidi Senungetuk, Wood, Water, and Distance, 2020, various materials, various dimensions. Digital image courtesy of the artists and Fuller Craft Museum.

Figure 4.

Jasleen Kaur, Re-rites, 2020, charred oak wood and electronics, various dimensions, fabricated in collaboration with Eleanor Lakelin. Digital image courtesy of the artist and Fuller Craft Museum.

Figure 5. Jeffrey Gibson (Mississippi Choctaw-Cherokee), Masks 1, 2, and 3, from The Past As Future Artifact, various materials, various dimensions. Digital image courtesy of the artist and Fuller Craft Museum.

Figure 6.

Sonya Clark, Power Tools: press / text / land / language (detail), 2020, hot metal type, linen paper, earth from Plymouth, MA, various dimensions, fabricated in collaboration with Ed Rayher of Swamp Press, Mary Hark of HARK! Handmade Paper, and Bo Peng. Digital image courtesy of the artist and Fuller Craft Museum.

Response by

Glenn Adamson, Independent curator and author based in New York

Another Crossing

On 6 September 1620, the Mayflower embarked from Plymouth, England, with a crew and 102 passengers. Many were English non-conformists, leaving their homelands for fear that their separatist religious communities would otherwise perish. These self-described “saints” sighted land some two months later. They established a settlement, naming it after the last place they had seen in Europe. Within a year, half were dead. The survivors were among the first to build a permanent home in what seemed to them a “new world”.

But of course, this site was already long inhabited. The Wampanoag people lived in the region, which to them was Patuxet. Many stories have been handed down about this population and its interactions with European settlers—some about mutual reliance, some about conflict. The long-term consequences, however, are not in debate: for the settlers, increasing political dominance; for the Indigenous population, widespread disease, death, and displacement.

The implications of the Mayflower crossing are so far-reaching that they are difficult to comprehend in retrospect. From one point of view, by far the dominant one in American culture, the voyage is a national origin story. For Indigenous peoples, it is just one event within a long and tragic history, its anniversary an occasion for mourning. There is common ground here in the very act of remembrance. But, in 2020, four hundred years after the Mayflower set sail, the distance between those two perspectives could feel vast indeed, more difficult to navigate than an ocean in a wooden boat.

Another Crossing charts a course through this abyss nonetheless. The project is itself a transatlantic collaboration—organized by the Plymouth College of Art and The Box in Plymouth, England, and Fuller Craft Museum, which is in Plymouth County, Massachusetts. During the exhibition’s development, the artists traveled to both sites to better understand the historical context by visiting key locations, and meeting historians, academics, and museum curators. The premise of the show is this: each participating artist has created work in response to the Mayflower’s anniversary, utilizing only technology that existed in 1620. Every work was realized with tools, materials, and processes that were available in the early seventeenth century.

There were several reasons behind this rather demanding parameter. First, it highlights the sophisticated practices that were in use in 1620, like beadwork, joinery, metalsmithing, leatherwork, and pottery. In some ways, people then possessed a greater material intelligence than we tend to today. This is particularly true of Wampanoag and other Native peoples, who possessed complex arrays of artisanal knowledge and artistic métiers. The colonists, too, embarked on their voyage with an extensive range of skills in hand, among them textile crafts and printing.

There is also a more metaphorical intention behind the exhibition's craft-based time travel: another kind of crossing. Each work in the exhibition simultaneously inhabits two moments—1620 and 2020—or at any rate, vibrates resonantly across that period of four centuries. One cannot fully inhabit a prior moment in time, any more than one can assume another person's perspective. Each artist had to make their own separate peace with this fact, deciding where and how to draw the boundaries around their project's period-specificity.

In the exhibition, visitors encounter ten artists, joined together in a collective journey of discovery. The works that they have created are by turns introspective, outraged, sad, funny, surprising, and humane. Each offers its own complex commentary, a bit of wisdom that may help us traverse this anniversary year.

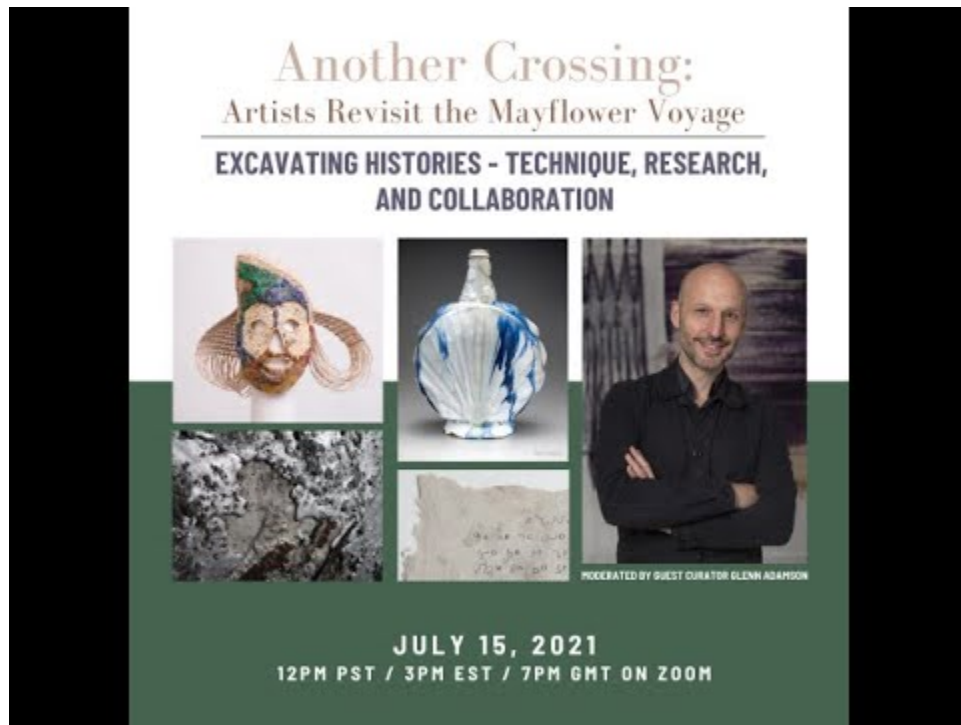

It has been four hundred years since the Mayflower sailed across the Atlantic, to an uncertain future; four hundred years since the Wampanoag witnessed strangers arriving on shore. We are just beginning to understand what happened next. Hopefully, this project makes a modest contribution in that direction.

View this illustration online

Figure 7.

Virtual tour, Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage, Fuller Craft Museum in Brockton, MA, from 2 May to 20 September 2020. Digital image courtesy of Dave Clough Photography.

Watch Video

Figure 8.

Glenn Adamson, Sonya Clark, Jeffrey Gibson, Elizabeth James-Perry, Jasleen Kaur, Christien Meindertsma, and Allison Smith, Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage. Excavating Histories—Technique, Research, and Collaboration, Fuller Craft Museum, première on 15 July 2021, live event recording, 1:43:01. Digital image courtesy of Fuller Craft Museum (all rights reserved).

Footnotes

- 1 Another Crossing: Artists Revisit the Mayflower Voyage was exhibited at Fuller Craft Museum in Brockton, MA, from 2 May to 20 September 2020. The show will be exhibited in Plymouth, England in spring 2022.

Licensing

The Publishers of British Art Studies are committed to supporting scholarship on British art and architecture of all periods. This publication is made available free of charge at <https://www.britishartstudies.ac.uk>. We ask users to identify the use of materials made available through this website and to provide an appropriate credit to the author and the publication, so that others may find and use our resources.

Except where otherwise noted, this work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 2.0 UK: England & Wales Licence (CC BY-NC 2.0 UK). To view a copy of this license, visit <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/2.0/uk/> or send a letter to Creative Commons, PO Box 1866, Mountain View, CA 94042, USA.

The Publishers fully support the protection of intellectual property and are committed to complying with, and strictly adhering to, all applicable copyright law. In many cases, copyright or other proprietary rights may be held by individuals or entities other than, or in addition to, the Publishers. If a work or a photographic image is still protected by copyright, you must cite the relevant copyright information when using the image and comply with all other terms or restrictions that may be applicable to that material.

In some cases, exceptions to copyright that permit limited use of protected works without the permission of the copyright owner may have been applied. We are confident that we have carried out due diligence in our use of copyrighted material as required, but we apologise for any inadvertent infringement of rights.

Digital copies of resources are made accessible for research for one of the following reasons:

- they are in the public domain;
- the rights are owned by the Publishers;
- we make them accessible under an exception or limitation to UK copyright law, as outlined in the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 (as amended);
- we have permission to make them accessible;
- or, there are no known restrictions on use.

If you believe that we have made a mistake and wish for your material to be removed from our site, please contact us at copyright@paul-mellon-centre.ac.uk.

Please include the following information with your request:

- Name and contact information, including email address and phone number.
- Identification of the resource for consideration of removal. Providing URLs in your communication will help us locate content quickly.
- The reason for the request.

The Publishers respond promptly, normally within 21 business days. We may remove the resource from our site while we assess the validity of the request. Upon completion of the assessment, we will take appropriate action and communicate that action to you.